- 3.7.2. All Orders filed by the Trading Members are addressed to the Clients taking part in the Joint Auction.
- 3.7.3. The Algorithm for Determining the Parties under the Sale and Purchase Agreements Concluded Based on the Results of the Joint Auction.
- 3.7.3.1. The total volume of the Agreements concluded based on the results of the Joint Auction (hereinafter, the Total Volume of the Agreements) is equal to the minimum of the summary volume of the Best Orders, expressed in lots, and the total number of the lots put up for the Joint Auction.

- 3.7.3.2. The volume of each Client's agreements shall be determined as the share of this Client in the Joint Auction Volume, expressed in lots and calculated based on the Total Volume of Agreements, rounded down to a whole number. The non-distributed balance of the lots from the Total Volume of Agreements remaining after such distribution shall be distributed among the Clients per one lot by order of increasing of their share in the Joint Auction volume (and in case of equal share(s) - by order of increasing of the Clients' ID codes (identifiers)).
- 3.7.3.3. Based on the prices and volumes in lots of the Best Orders, the Auction Volume-weighted average price shall be determined with two decimals precision (the Auction Volume-weighted average price shall be calculated as the summary volume of the Best Orders in the currency of their price, divided by their summary volume in commodity measurement units).
- 3.7.3.4. The Best Orders are ranked by the "price" parameters in two queues:
- Orders with the price equal or better than the Auction Volume-weighted average price;
 - Orders with the price worse than the Auction Volume-weighted average price.
- Hereinafter, the best price for sales Auction is understood as the higher price, and for purchase Auctions - as the lower price.
- 3.7.3.5. Orders in each of the successions are ranked by increasing deviation from the Auction Volume-weighted average price. Orders with the same price are ranked by increasing number of the Order.
- 3.7.3.6. Further, both queues are viewed as queues of lots each of which has a price and owner (the Member who has filed the order).
- 3.7.3.7. Further on, for each Client of the Joint Auction, as his share in the Joint Auction volume decreases (if the shares are equal, as the Client's ID code increases), the procedure of distribution of the lots among the Clients is conducted.
- 3.7.3.8. Distribution of lots begins with the first lot in the queue "Orders with the price equal or better than the Auction Volume-weighted average price".
- 3.7.3.9. The first lot in the queue (that is, the lot with the minimum deviation from the Auction Volume-weighted average price) from among the earlier undistributed lots is distributed to the Client.
- 3.7.3.10. If as the result of such distribution the Volume-weighted average price of the lots distributed to this Client has become better than the Auction Volume-weighted average price, the next lot is distributed to the Client from the queue "Orders with the price worse than the Auction Volume-weighted average price".

- 3.7.3.11. If as the result of such distribution the Volume-weighted average price of the lots distributed to this Client has become worse than or equal to the Auction Volume-weighted average price, the next lot is distributed to the Client from the queue “Orders with the price equal or better than the Auction Volume-weighted average price”.
- 3.7.3.12. The algorithm is repeated until the number of lots determined pursuant to cl. 3.7.3.2 is distributed to the Client. The algorithm is repeated for each Client taking part in the Joint Auction.
- 3.7.3.13. Based on the results of distribution of the lots, direct Orders from the Clients to the Winners are automatically filed, and Sale and Purchase Agreements are concluded. The volume of such Orders in the lots and counterparties from among the Winners shall be determined in conformity with distribution of the lots, performed as per the algorithm described above.
